

Mr Yuming Hui

Greater China Director

The Climate Group

Mr Yuming Hui brings a wealth of experience in working with local and international stakeholders in China in areas of energy efficiency and renewable energy in multiple sectors such as buildings, industry, supply chain, and rural development. He played leadership roles in developing and delivering projects ranging from policy innovation and business models, to standard development and demonstration projects, etc. which were designed for the promotion of eventual climate change mitigation. His experience also includes sustainability reporting, which helps organizations disclose their economic, environmental and social performances in communication with their stakeholders.

Prior to joining the Climate Group, Mr Hui played China-based leadership roles for international NGOs and private company in such capacities as the Greater China Director of the Global Reporting Initiative, senior advisor for the Rocky Mountain Institute, country manager of EcoTech International, Board Member of the Efficiency Evaluation Organization, consultant and China chief representative of the Natural Resources Defense Council. He started his expedition in the environment and climate arena twenty years ago with a Chinese environment NGO.
