

How to Operate Your Business /Organisation in a Socially Responsible Way? An Introductory Training of BS ISO 26000:2010(2nd Intake)

(84115)

More and more, organisations and their stakeholders around the world are becoming increasingly mindful of the need for and benefits of socially responsible behaviour. A primary objective of being socially responsible is to contribute to sustainable development. Globally, organisations are being inspired to design their social responsibility strategies on the basis of ISO 26000. This 6-hour-long course provides the basic concepts of the implementation and management of a social responsibility programme as proposed in the ISO 26000 guidance. The course shall give explanations on the context of different core subjects, i.e. organisational governance, human rights, labour practices, environment, fair operating practices, consumer issues, community involvement and development.
